Statement of Need and Purpose

Health care transition for youth and young adults is a priority for many U.S. health care and public health entities. There is a significant impact on individuals, as well as systems at large, when a structured and intentional transition process from pediatric to adult health care is not integrated into routine care. Youth and young adults are more likely to disengage, delay, or inappropriately use health services into adulthood resulting in poorer health outcomes and higher costs.

Persistent interpersonal barriers hinder open and engaging conversations between adolescents and health care providers. Some young people even choose to forgo services to avoid the potential realities of stigma, confidentiality breaches, and judgement from their health care providers – particularly in discussing more personal health behaviors and topics.

Elements of Competence

This educational activity is designed to change learner competence and focuses on the following competency areas:

- The American Board of Medical Specialties¹: Interpersonal and communication skills
- Institute of Medicine: Patient-centered care
- Pharmacist (CAPE): Communication and patient-centered care
- Nursing and Interprofessional: Interprofessional communication

Intended Audience

This activity is designed for physicians, nurses, physician assistants, pharmacists, social workers, public health professionals, and health educators, as well as other members of the health care team who have interest in empowering youth to transition from pediatric to adult health care.

Learning Objectives

As a result of this educational activity learners will be able to:

- Describe the concerns, preferences, and realities of young people in health care settings.

- Value diversity among teens and recognize the challenges and opportunities this poses in health care settings
- Explain ways to provide high-quality, youth-friendly health care services.
- Develop confidence and skills to communicate effectively and build relationships with teens.
- Advocate for and effectively communicate about appropriate youth-friendly health care services among the health care team.
